CLEAR SAILING FOR SPRY.

The announcement of Governor John C. Cutler that he has reconsidered his determination to be a candidate for re-nomination is something of a surprise and most certainly a disappointment to his friends. It is a surprise because he had asked support for another term in office less than a month ago, and announced his program in case of election, with an elaborateness that showed he expected to get the nomination and be elected.

Ostensibly the governor's retirement is due to a sense of obligation to William Spry, who has entered the race, for Spry's active help in the preliminary campaign which made Cutler the candidate four years ago. The real reason, however, is probably the fact that no Republican can hope to be a successful aspirant for office without the support of the Smoot machine, which has chosen Spry for the candidate this year. Governor Cutler knows enough about the power of the machine to realize that he would be beaten if he ventured to compete with Spry; and, like the cautious man of business he is, prefers to jump off rather than be pushed off in the convention.

With the governor's voluntary withdrawal, the field is left clear for the machine candidate. One or two others have been mentioned for the place by their loving friends, and Swen O. Neilson has even been heard to say he would like to make the race, but no one takes them seriously. Spry has been set apart for the nomination, and no Republican with gumption enough to sign checks is going to waste his money trying to beat the machine at its own game.

In this, as in all the other affairs of the Republican party of Utah, the nominations will be determined by the federal office-holders who are running things, and no one else need apply. In quitting thus early Governor Cutler is only recognizing the inevitable and demonstrating anew his ability to know when he has had enough of a good thing.

IN LINE FOR BRYAN.

Herman Ridder, president of the American Newspaper Publishers association and owner of the New York Staats Zeitung, has promised Mr. Bryan his support in this campaign. The announcement is important, not only because Mr. Ridder is an influential citizen wielding great political power through his newspaper, but also because it is an index of the trend among those conservative eastern Democrats who have stood aloof in Mr. Bryan's former campaigns, when they did not oppose him outright.

In his effort to secure the removal of the duty on news paper and wood pulp, Mr. Ridder discovered that the Republicans in congress were irrevocably committed to further the fortunes of the paper trust by retention of the duty on its product. Even when he had secured the written promise of support from a majority in congress, he found himself unable to secure action, because Speaker Cannon and the committee on rules would not permit a bill for the purpose to come before the house. And the report of the Mann special committee, which secured a postponement of action at the session just closed, only served to convince the German editor that the Republican party would do nothing to reform the evils of such monopolies as are made possible by an unjust tariff law.

It is only natural that Mr. Ridder should throw his influence into the campaign on behalf of Bryan and the Democratic party after such an object lesson. Himself a victim of trust extortion due to the tariff, he is determined to do what can be done to secure justice; and he will be able to carry with him a very heavy percentage of the substantial element among the German-American voters of the country.

The report of the affair, says that Mr. Bryan made no comment on Mr. Ridder's telegram giving in his allegiance, but that the Nebraska was visibly pleased. He has good reason to be pleased.

For the first time in his political career Mr. Bryan finds a united party in sympathy with him. In 1896 the desertion of the Cleveland Democrats made his defeat certain weeks in advance of the election; in 1900 the old breach still remained. In 1904 his own followers were unwilling to enter enthusiastically into the campaign, for Judge Parker, whose nomination had been due largely to the men who refused to support the Lincoln man. This year, however, the warring elements in the party have found common ground in the platform and have buried their animosities in allegiance to the party. Much of this better spirit is due to the attitude of Mr. Bryan himself, who has used his potent influence to secure harmony and has succeeded beyond expectation. In the fight for restoration of government to the people, he has the support of those who have been with him since his first entrance into party leadership as a matter of course; and, in addition, he has the conservatives who held aloof until they found that a Roosevelt in office was more radical and dangerous than any candidate the democracy has under consideration.

The reaction from Rooseveltism to sanity has done the democracy a signal service in restoring to the party men like Herman Ridder, who desire above all things exact justice and observance of constitutional methods in government.

ELECTION ON THE ISTHMUS.

"The commissioners representing the United States kept watch on the balloting at each of the polling stations," says the dispatch from Colon announcing the result of the election on the isthmus. Senator Obaldia, the Taft-Roosevelt candidate for president, received all the votes cast, the opposition declining to appear at the polls under the watchful eyes of American spies, who were for the other fellow.

The peace, calling and election of Obaldia was probably made sure during the recent visit of Mr. Taft to the isthmus, when the "great war secretary" made his final trip before the hustle for the presidency at home began, and he had remarkable success in stifling all opposition, the poor devils who live in the imaginary republic being afraid to run counter to the wishes of the Washington administration. It isn't much to the credit of Mr. Taft that he should have succeeded so well in using the great power of the United States in overawing the handful of dusky citizens on the isthmus, even though the formation of the so-called republic came about through the more or less disreputable connivance of Roosevelt and his advisers. If this government is going to interfere every time they have an election down there we might as well annex the strip and stop his hypocritical Republican scheme of laying violent hands upon the rights and liberties of weaker nations in the name of civilization. Taft appears to have been an apt pupil of Roosevelt in this regard.

HOT WEATHER RULES.

The extreme heat of the past few days, accompanied by many deaths and prostrations in the crowded tenement districts of the big cities, and much physical discomfort even in Salt Lake, calls to mind certain rules which, if followed, will do much to ameliorate the conditions of a torrid day in any climate. They are as follows:

1. Abstinence from alcoholic beverages and a very sparing indulgence in meat.
2. The avoidance of iced drinks of every description. Cool, not iced water, may be used plentifully and tea will be found beneficial, but very cold drinks of any kind are extremely harmful.
3. Frequent bathing is an excellent thing, inasmuch as a prime necessity for health in hot weather is to keep the pores of the skin open. Turkish baths, at least once a week, and often, if possible, are highly recommended.
4. All kinds of mental worry and excitement are very harmful in hot weather, so that one should do his best to preserve a tranquil mind, no matter where the mercury may stand.
5. As for rest, avoid strenuous endeavor, walk on the shady side of the street, if compelled to walk at all; see that the clothing is comfortable and take life just as easily as possible.

None of the rules are hard to observe, and a trial will convince even the most careless about such matters that they have been enduring a great deal of needless suffering at this time of the year.

Stuyvesant Fish thinks it a tougher proposition for a man who has been dragging out a miserable existence on $250,000 a year to be cut down to $50,000 than for a working man to get along on $10 a week against the $15 he drew as wages in flush times. "God help the rich; the poor can work."

The mountain and lake breezes amply compensate the Salt Laker each and every summer evening for the physical discomfort he has endured during the day. No sweeter nights in this immediate propinquity after a blistering hot day.

There's one thing noticeable when the "lid" is screwed down tightly on Sunday, and that is that a large number of citizens are found waiting for the last car, and that many of them fail to catch it.

It is eminently fitting that Governor Cutler should entertain the kindest feeling for Marshal Spry, for the marshal was the man who "moved 'em over" four years ago.

The advance guard of the local option army is with us, and the brewers are manning the walls to repel the invaders. Hence the dry Sunday.

Roosevelt doesn't seem to be able to run any bluffs on Castro.

Kiser entertained a party of friends last evening at a beautiful dance at the new inn in Emigration canyon, the affair being in compliment to their sister, Miss Frances Kiser of Davenport. CHANGE THE TREATMENT.

(New York World.)

The patient he lay on his back and he groaned.
"For his body was racked with ill,"
"Will I never get well again?" he moaned.
"I fear that my remedy will be dephoned,"
Said the doctor, "I'll give you squills."

"What, take squills again," the poor patient cried.
"Have you naught in the way of pills?"
Don't you know that, with squills I've nearly died?
Don't you think it's time something else was tried?"
Said the doctor: "I'll give you squills."

"Great guns," cried the patient, "what else can you do?"
My body is shaking with chills;
I know that you never can pull me through—
My head is on fire, my lips getting blue."
Said the doctor: "I'll give you squills."

The patient gave way—turned face to the wall
And died, and was rid of his ills.
This is a warning to Democrats all:
Take Bryan squills and you'll find out next fall
Too much of such medicine kills.

SHE KNEW THE PLACE.

(Youth's Companion.)
"Where are we, Bobby?" she asked.
"I don't know, grandma," answered the little boy.
"Didn't the brakeman say something just now?"
"No. He just stuck his head inside the door and sneezed."

"Help me with these things, Bobby," she exclaimed, hurriedly. "This is Oshkosh. It's where we got off."

WHY HE IGNORED HIM.

(Freeman's Journal.)

The late Archbishop Ryan, when asked if he did not care to make some replies to a cockney English evangelist's charges, shook his head decidedly.
"Oh, no, no. I can have nothing to do with him."
"Why?" was the surprised inquiry.
"Because," was the calm response, "he is the man who heartlessly drives me 'out of home, happiness and heaven.'"
